Our purpose.
Your passion.

2017-18 ANNUAL REPORT

National Wood Flooring Association
MISSION STATEMENT

To promote the use of wood flooring in residential, educational, and commercial environments and to provide members with the education and training necessary for personal and business success.
Just like every wood floor has a story, so does every business. Maybe yours is part of a multi-generation company that has been harvesting lumber since before you were even born. Maybe yours is the result of friends getting together after graduation because you had some organizational and sales skills, and thought working together would be fun. Or maybe yours started at the kitchen table, with nothing more than a few tools and a dream.

No matter how your business started, or when, your passion is our purpose. We know that different businesses have different needs, which is why we are constantly implementing and revising programs for businesses of every type, shape, and size.

Through technical resources, training, and networking, we provide the opportunities and tools you need to reach your unique personal and professional goals.

Most importantly, NWFA is about promoting and supporting your passion: wood flooring. No other material provides the timeless durability, value, and beauty that will help your customers tell their family's story. Nor does any other material provide the sense of craftsmanship and pride that will help you tell your company's story.

NWFA is about building community, together, one floor at a time. We're honored to be part of your story.
Chances are, you didn’t grow up thinking you wanted to work in the wood flooring industry, yet here you are. There’s just something about wood that draws you in and takes hold of you: the look, the texture, the smell, and yes, the art. Our purpose is to connect you with people who share that passion, and to help you find success for your business and your family.

Stephanie Owen
Education & Member Engagement Director

“I’m impressed with the NWFA’s commitment to education and by the ease with which members of this organization collaborate to grow, thrive, and improve their businesses.”

Kevin Plumacher
LeBlanc Floors, Seattle, Washington
For every $1 spent on membership dues, you can save $100 through NWFA savings programs.

Education is important at every stage of life. Each of us should strive to further our knowledge and expertise to stay at the top of our game and become a better version of ourselves. At the NWFA, we have developed educational opportunities that accomplish that for craftsmen who are passionate about wood because we share that passion.

“I have been certified through the NWFA for just a brief time now. There has been a huge shift in my business since receiving my certification. One HUGE change we are making is focusing solely on high-end retrofitting of existing floors. The move would not have been possible without the education I have received through the tireless instructors at the NWFA.”

When I started in the wood flooring industry in 2002, I had no idea how passionate I would become about my career. To be able to realize the fullest potential of an existing floor - there’s a lot of satisfaction there.

After working in the industry for a few years, I ventured out on my own, starting Diamond Wood Floors in 2005. I desired to do better work, to grow, and to go beyond the skill level I was at during that time. However, I didn’t know how to do that until I came across the NWFA and got involved in their education program.

This education has been pivotal in helping me to develop my understanding of wood and wood properties. By understanding how wood floors relate to the building and its environment, I can provide a better product and know the limitations of the material I’m providing.

Aside from the education, the networking opportunities the NWFA provides are unparalleled. Not only have I built relationships with other industry professionals during the Expo or hands-on training, but I’ve also been able to develop relationships with the manufacturers of the products I use.

The NWFA has a role all the way around truly from the forest to the floor and beyond that to long-term maintenance. NWFA is always my go-to resource. I couldn’t be more grateful for the programs they provide and what they’ve been able to do for my business and my career. I look forward to the years to come and to seeing where this career takes me, with the help of the resources the NWFA provides.

In 1910, my great-grandfather founded Waterlox in Cleveland, Ohio, and began manufacturing coatings products for wood flooring. For four generations, our family has worked tirelessly to make what we feel is the best handmade Tung oil varnish around.

One thing that has remained the same throughout the years is the company’s motive. We are truly passionate about what we do and we strive every day to provide the best products for our customers and their flooring needs.

Since joining the NWFA in 1989, our company has always taken advantage of, and benefited from, the numerous resources the NWFA offers. The resource that has proven most valuable to Waterlox is the NWFA Wood Flooring Expo.

Exhibiting at the NWFA Expo allows us to further develop relationships with current and potential customers, as well as showcase and answer questions about our latest products. We meet with old friends and make new acquaintances at every show. It’s an annual event that we won’t miss!

The platforms the NWFA provides to help us educate contractors about our products are another great benefit of being a member. Through attending hands-on training events or sending Waterlox representatives, we are able to demonstrate how to properly use our products, let students try them out with our guidance, and be there to answer any questions our users might have. It’s an excellent way for us to get our products out there and help our customers feel confident using them.

We are very appreciative of all the NWFA provides to help our company continue achieving success for many years to come.
Our industry requires professionals to combine a unique blend of artistry with a keen business sense. Hardwood Floors magazine is about sharing stories and learning from each other to advance the craft. From the latest industry news, to business best practices, to installation techniques, we strive to ensure the right information is available to our members when and where they need it most.

Stacy Brown
Vice President of Publishing & Communications

“Hardwood Floors magazine is a valuable resource, no matter what part of the wood flooring industry you specialize in. It’s obvious from the quality of the content that the contributors are hardwood flooring industry veterans that have real-world experience they can speak from when writing about specific topics.”

It is rewarding to plan and manage an event that impacts so many people and businesses. Each year, we get to see our members’ eyes light up when they run into an old friend, or find a product on the showfloor that will improve their business. It’s very gratifying to know how this event brings our industry together to network and grow.

Penny Key
Meeting & Trade Show Director

"I learned new things about the wood flooring industry and met amazing people, as well. Attending Expo has been business-changing in a major way. I am not only equipped with more knowledge to do the work, but have begun looking at new equipment to further grow my business."

In 1993, I started installing floors with my dad and brother at the company we started, Simmons Installation Services. We prided ourselves on having the necessary skills to get the job done right, something that has stuck with me throughout my entire career.

After a disagreement with a contractor about how to install, I felt inclined to learn more about becoming a wood flooring inspector. Since joining the NWFA in 2004, education has always been the most valuable resource for my career. As an inspector, it’s crucial to understand the installation, and sand & finish processes so you are equipped to figure out what is wrong with the floor.

I’ve continued my education with the NWFA, taken as many classes as I can, and I’m so grateful for that. The more I’ve gotten involved with the NWFA, the more exposure my business has gotten and the more successful I’ve become.

As an organization, the NWFA has a good reputation and sets a great standard. The standard that the NWFA holds its Certified Professionals to adds a lot of weight to the credential, which is especially helpful as an inspector when testifying in court.

I’m forever appreciative of what the NWFA has done for my business and for me personally. I take great pride in using my business and skill set to help wood flooring installers become successful and reduce error, as well as developing successful flooring systems in situations that weren’t otherwise conducive to wood flooring. I truly love what I do.

Since starting in the flooring retail industry more than 17 years ago, I’ve learned a lot about flooring.

Every day I learn something new about the hardwood business – it’s a gratifying challenge to understand every scenario. My favorite thing about my career in wood flooring and my passion behind what I do, is being able to help customers find their dream floor.

I love to learn new things so I can give my customers the best information possible and help them make the best decision for their floor.

When I started working at Lockwood Flooring nearly three years ago, I naturally became more involved with the NWFA, specifically the Certified Professional program.

Because of the extensive training and certification requirements that NWFA Certified Inspectors abide by, they are without question our go-to resource for our hardwood claims.

Our sales reps go out to consumers and do the initial inspection. However, if we need a more in-depth inspection, an NWFA Certified Inspector will be commissioned to give us his or her findings.

As a distributor, we admire the hard work and dedication that the NWFA Certified Inspector program requires of its inspectors. It’s no quick or easy task!

I look forward to getting more involved with the NWFA in the years to come and to continue taking advantage of the services they offer to help better educate my customers.

"Ours is an industry motivated by something beyond a paycheck. Sure, everyone needs to make a living, but our members are generous with their time, talent, and resources: traveling hundreds of miles to help a colleague install floors, donating flooring to someone in need, establishing scholarships to help train someone they've never met. This is what NWFA does. It creates community.

Anita Howard
Chief Operating Officer

“I can’t thank the NWFA enough for creating opportunities to work on community service projects with organizations like the Little Bit Foundation and the Gary Sinise Foundation. It’s simply amazing and gratifying – the best chicken soup for the soul I have ever had.”
